This book is for boys and girls and their parents, of course for every human being who has ever received the affection of a non-human being.

Here you will discover, from a little girl who solves the problem of rabbits in her garden to the rescue of monkeys in the Amazon by an extraordinarily talented child. In these stories, the Earth appears as a giant athlete full of human guardians fighting for animal rights.

Animals that lose their habitat, need food, are mistreated, put in captivity, or abandoned, find hope and a voice in the eyes of children who can understand them. You will meet the characters that reflect a courageous and responsible childhood that gives justice to the most vulnerable.

United, they defend the right of all animals to live free in their natural environment, terrestrial, aerial, or aquatic, and condemn any deprivation of freedom, even those with educational purposes. It is a creative childhood that breaks with the schemes of the system, that recognizes and puts into practice the right to the environment, welfare, and freedom of all animals as non-human beings.
