Who could even imagine that two complete strangers from opposite sides of the world that did not speak the same language could meet online and fall in love. Is this even possible? Yes, it is not only possible but this is exactly how it happened for Bryan and Anna. Anna was From Russia and Bryan from America. Anna spoke Russian and Bryan only spoke English. Bryan's struggle to find love in a marriage that had completely fallen apart after a length of 12 years came to an end when his wife decided to leave him and his 2 children with a mortgage he could not afford.

With much effort, Bryan pulled himself together and began working on starting his new life as a single father. Bryan did not have the time or the money to enter the dating scene so he began to seek out new friends online via social networking sites.

One day Bryan received an email from a friend suggesting a new social networking website that he had discovered. Bryan found the website interesting so he decided to sign up on the website and began searching for new friends that were nearby. But unfortunately he had no luck.

He even broadened the search to include the entire United States but it seemed everyone he met was not who they claimed to be or they had other motivations. Every conversation seemed to lead to some sob story indicating that they were in need of money. One woman was even bold enough to ask him for his Bank account information.

One evening Bryan decided to broaden the scope of his search to other countries. He had some friends who were from Russia so he decided to look for someone he could correspond with in Russia. He didn't know the Russian Language but he was aware of translation tools online that could help him translate.

The list of profiles seemed endless. They were filled with words written in a language that Bryan did not understand and contained photos of women that were probably exaggerations at best.

Suddenly Bryan stopped on one profile in particular and all time seemed to stop as he gazed on the most beautiful woman he had ever laid eyes on. The profile was written in Russian but he was able to use an Google Translator to translate the profile. Very little information was included in the profile. It only showed brief information about her employment along with the region that she lived in Russia. Her name was Anna.

In a leap of faith and not knowing if this beautiful woman would get a message if he sent one, Let alone if she would even give him the time of day so Bryan decided to say hello.

The message was brief and Bryan typed "Privet (Hello) Anna!"

Without another thought he submitted the message into the universe of possibility.

Anna responded with a brief Hello, "Bryan! How are you?", written in Russian.

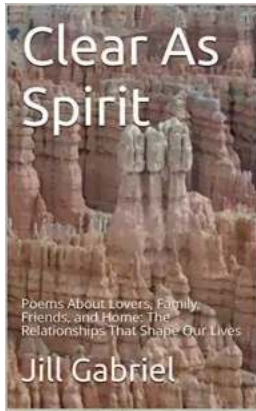

That was only the beginning.

Hello Anna is the story of Bryan and Anna.

They met online and fell in love using Google Translator and Skype. For almost 2 years they communicated using Google Translator. Their entire conversation is recorded in Skype and is nearly 4000 pages long starting from the first "Privet Anna!" until the final "Goodnight" before Anna moved to America.

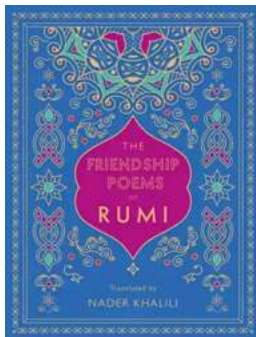

The Never Ending Letter is only part of the conversation that was introduced on the blog www.helloanna.com. Shortly after meeting Anna, Bryan discovered a new talent he never knew he had, Poetry. The Never Ending Letter is a 26 page poem written from Bryan to Anna while she still lived in Russia. Anna has even compared the poetry to Shakespeare.

We sincerely hope you enjoy the poem.
