Family secrets and long lost friendships take three Tybee friends on a road trip of discovery.

When Julep Tucker gets an SOS from her long, lost cousin Etta, she listens to her heart. Somehow Julep will find her childhood friend. Fiercely loyal, her new friends Sylvia and Rachel jump in to share the journey. They pack up Rachel's new camper and hit the road. But as the trip unfolds, this search for a much-loved cousin becomes a journey of revelation for all three women.

In a side trip to visit her son in his "perfect" marriage, Sylvia finds that things are far from perfect. How involved should a mother be when her child's marriage is headed for the rocks? Away from home, Julep obsesses about her relationship with Griff Sanders. With time, she's grown accustomed to her independence as a widow. Can she give that up now? While her friends are gone, Rachel has dinner with Raleigh Prescott and learns that a promise she made last summer might come due. Can she rise to the occasion and forgive her former roommate?

Eventually Etta is discovered in Florida, where she's developed a most unusual career. Her cousin hasn't sent Julep that call for help. But Etta's situation is dire and the Tucker family is faced with some serious decisions. Maybe women don't know how resilient they can be until called upon to be stronger than they ever imagined. This is book four of a six-book series.
